

THE BOSTON CONSERVATORY

MUSIC DANCE THEATER

Teaching Music to Students on the Autism Spectrum

The Boston Conservatory announces a unique professional development opportunity for Music Educators that will take place on three Saturdays in September. This program is offered by the Music Education department in conjunction with the Conservatory's program for students on the autism spectrum.

The training sessions will include:

- An overview of Autism Spectrum Diagnosis (ASD)
- Detailed study of the unique challenges in teaching individuals on the autism spectrum
- A focus on strategies to teach music effectively to students on the autism spectrum, including in one-on-one settings, in classroom settings and in ensemble settings
- Opportunities for role plays and hands-on problem solving
- Resources for music educators who teach students on the autism spectrum

The instructors will include special educators, music therapists, autism experts, and music educators.

Space is limited. Register today!
